

Carroll B. Wright
165 Brassy Ct.
Alpharetta, GA 30022

May 4, 2007

David Freeland
Dr. Roof Atlanta, Inc.
1460 Woodstock Rd.
Roswell, GA 30075

Mr. Freeland,

I would like to let you know that we appreciate the great company you have put together. As we began looking at roofing companies to replace our roof and gutters we interviewed quite a few less expensive companies but found unprofessional people who were not thorough.

When Thomas Stratton showed up for a consultation, I knew this guy was a Professional. And if Dr. Roof could live up to everything he said Dr. Roof could do and would do, I knew we wanted Dr. Roof to do the work. He gave us great advice on the smallest details without trying to over-sell us anything. I am a Sales and Marketing guy and I like it when another sales person gives me the facts without the sales pitch. I must emphasize that your company did everything down to the smallest detail that Thomas said the crews would do.

We were impressed with all the detail work the crew exhibited. They didn't just put on shingles, they built our house a roof system that should last. They showed up on time, worked late, and cleaned up their mess everyday before they left. On their last day they came to the door and asked that I show them where the patio furniture they had moved should be placed. I told them I would put it back but they insisted that it was their job. I am 66 years old, so I let them do their job. In this day and age this kind of professionalism is unheard of, especially in a big city like Atlanta. Your training of your crews is obvious.

We also had your company put on gutters and guards. Our house needed 135 feet of Fascia replaced before the gutter work could be done. Vic Johnson showed up to do the fascia work and the gutter guards. I might add there were some difficult shaped boards needing repair. This guy is one of the most professional craftsmen I've seen in Atlanta. Vic would knock on the door everyday to let us know when he arrived to begin work, and then he'd let us know when he was ready to leave. One day at lunch time he knocked and told me he was going to lunch and then to pick up some materials, and he'd be right back. I was impressed! Besides doing everything he said he'd do he was so neat, there was never any materials left lying around.

My wife and I both dreaded the roof replacement because of the cost, and most of all because of the mess and the stories we had heard from other people.

I must say we had a very pleasant experience with Dr. Roof. The house looks great!!

If you ever want to use us as a reference we would be more than happy to give you the highest recommendation ever.

Thanks for the job well done!!

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read "Carroll B. Wright". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.

Carroll B. Wright